

About Me

This research study was conducted by Kathleen O’Nyon, a curious and passionate fourth year student at Ryerson University, majoring in Professional Communications.

Personability, relationship building and communicating sit at the core of my professional and personal strengths. I have an affinity for working with others and hope to find myself situated in a career that compliments that interest. My passions range from sports, to music, to social advocacy to environmental sustainability. I appreciate the versatility of this program and look forward to building upon the transferable skills and methods I have adopted over these past four years.
